

OPEN FORUM

BABY BUSINESS

I read Mr. D.S.'s letter in your Open Forum section in August 1983. He mentioned that he was having a difficult time getting rubber pants that fit. I solved that problem by going to a hospital supply store or drug store that handles incontinence supplies. There I have found large rubber pants—both pull-on and snap-ups—and adult size disposable diapers. There is something incredibly safe and warm about wearing some soft diapers next to your skin, and I am glad to have found some that fit me as they should.

I have been an adult baby for about two years now and enjoy my new-found infancy to the hilt. In the evenings I enjoy a bath using a popular baby bath; then I rub down with baby lotion and powder myself. When getting ready for bed I wear triple cloth diapers, an adult disposable diaper and rubber pants. I found that this combination prevents me from getting the bed wet when I mess in my diapers. I then warm 8 ounces of baby formula and take this feeding at bedtime. I generally sleep with my teddy bear and a pacifier until early in the morning when it is time for my change and another 8 ounce bottle of formula. Later in the morning I have a bottle of strained baby juice and baby cereal. I get to do this about twice a week which is about all my wife can stand.

I must admit that after a rough day in the business world, an evening in the soft baby world is the answer to releasing a lot of tensions I face day in and day out.

Mr. J.B.,
Florida